Re: Conference Publications Now Available: Building a Culture for Patient-Centered Team-Based Care. (Executive Summary, Abstract Compendium, Conference Proceedings)

We are pleased to notify you that three publications are now available from our conference entitled Building a Culture for Patient-Centered Team-Based Care, held in the Wisconsin Dells on November 12, 2014. These documents were jointly developed by the Wisconsin Council on Medical Education and Workforce (WCMEW) and the Wisconsin Nurses Association (WNA). These documents, as well as the three keynote presentations, have been web-published and are now available at www.wisconsinnurses.org and via the links below:

- Summary of Proceedings, Executive Summary
- Compendium of Pre-Conference Abstracts
- Conference Proceedings
- Appendix A: Maureen Smith, MD, MPH, PhD
- Appendix B: Andy Anderson, MD, MBA
- Appendix C: Richard Dart, MD

On behalf of both our organizations we extend our gratitude to all of you especially our conference speakers, panelists, and facilitators. This work reflects continuing and evolving efforts by Wisconsin's health organizations and leaders to advance patient-centered team-based care as an important health care redesign strategy. WCMEW and WNA are continuing their close partnership and are currently drafting a conceptual framework for patient-centered team-based care that will be shared system wide for input and refinement later this year. We also are in the beginning stages of planning a follow up conference for fall 2015.

Our Ask:

We ask that you review these publications, formally link these to your organization's website, and notify your partners of their availability. Disseminating the findings will broaden our networks and deepen engagement as together we advance patient-centered team-based care as a strategy to protect, promote, and improve the health of patients/clients and the communities in which they grow, work, learn, and play.

Thank you.
